The Monastery of Saint Bishoy is one of the most ancient monasteries of Wadi al-Natrun. Wadi al-Natrun ("the valley of natron") is a desert depression 50 kilometers long located about 90 kilometers northwest of Cairo and is the most important monastic center in Egypt.

The Monastery of Saint Bishoy bears the name of its patron, one of the monastic fathers of the fourth century. The word "Bishoy" is from the Coptic and means "lofty". In 340 A. D. Saint Bishoy went to Wadi al-Natrun to live in the desert. He made his home on the site of the present monastery and became a spiritual father to the monks who gathered around him. When the monasteries of Wadi al-Natrun were sacked by the Berbers in 407, Saint Bishoy took refuge in Antinopolis, where he later died. His body was returned to the monastery in the eleventh century and is now in the church that bears his name.

In the fifth century the Emperor Zenon built a fortress in the monastery to protect the monks from the attacks by the Berbers. During one of these attacks the Berbers killed 49 monks at the Monastery of Saint Macarius, and washed their swords in a well at the Monastery of Saint Bishoy. This well is now called the "well of the martyrs". The monastery’s gateway has an inner gatehouse and tower, and is the most complete and best preserved gateway in Wadi al-Natrun. The monastery is the second residence of His Holiness Pope Shenouda III.
Explanation of Figures And Photo Orientation.

This book has been structured to provide the reader with the opportunity to experience the monastery as if one were walking through it. Consequently, the maps on pages 3, 4 and 39 should be used to provide an understanding of where the photos were taken in relation to the monastery as a whole.

Page three provides an aerial view of the overall monastery complex, showing the details of the area within its walls as well as the area immediately surrounding the walls. This view corresponds with page 4, which is a map of the grounds within the monastery walls with its major buildings and features labelled.

The majority of the photos in this book are provided with a key in the form of a letter, for example (A), to show the reader where the image is in relationship to the monastery as a whole. These letters correspond to the key on the Map of the Grounds on page 4.

Page 39 is a floor plan of the main church, the Church of Saint Bishoy, with major features of the church labelled. The Church of Saint Bishoy floor plan uses a combination of the letter H (to correspond with its location on the Map of the Grounds on page 4) and a numbering system, to show where the photos are within the church, for example (H1).
Aerial map of the grounds of the Monastery of Saint Bishoy depicting the portions of the monastery within its walls and their immediate surroundings. See page 4 for a key to the locations designated by the letters above.
